The image is a vibrant, hand-drawn style illustration of Seoul's cityscape. It features a dense network of yellow and blue lines representing roads and landmarks. Several locations are highlighted with red circles, including a large red circle around the National Assembly building and several smaller ones near the Han River and other landmarks. Other areas are marked with blue circles. Overlaid on the map are two large, bold Korean text blocks. The top block reads "살다보니 잘 되는 구나!!" (It turns out well after living). Below it is another block reading "그러게 좀 그럴듯하게 살자니까!" (It's better to live like this). Two specific locations are labeled with text bubbles: "김삿갓" (Kim Ssanggak) is located in the upper central area, and "죽전출판" (Gukjeon Publishing) is located in the lower center. The overall composition is dynamic and expressive, blending urban planning with personal narrative.
